

You Do Not Know What You Are Missin'

(Henry Hipkens - 1994)

Before they bit the apple Adam never said to Eve
"Cover up my darling you've got nothing up your sleeve"
For though they both were naked they did not possess a clue
And in that same respect how they remind me so of you

They did not know what they were missin'
They could not see the truth at hand
And just like you they wouldn't listen
But someday I will make you understand

Jill paid no attention when her mother used to say
"Try the sweet potatoes I would not lead you astray"
But they looked kinda funny and she'd come this far without
And so she said "no thank you, would you pass the sauerkraut"

She did not know what she was missin'
She could not see the truth at hand
And just like you she wouldn't listen
But someday I will make you understand

So here's what you are missin'
Someone who'll treat you right
Who'll be there in the morning after lovin' you all night
Someone whose love you'll cherish
And someone to share romance
And I could be that someone if you'd just give me the chance

You do not know what you are missin'
You can not see the truth at hand
And though I've tried you wouldn't listen
But someday I will make you understand
Oh yeah
Someday I will make you understand
